SLANG OF BICYCLE RIDERS.

What "Your Lamp is Out" and "He Has Punctured His Tire" Indicate.

As was naturally to be expected, with 20,000 men and women riding bicycles daily in Oakland and San Francisco, and fraternizing to an extent that is general, and bicycle slang has sprung up which will be constantly enriched.

A youth was talking boastfully of some deeds of his in the presence of a group of young men and women who were resting on their wheels at the Park. He had evidently not rehearsed his story sufficiently, and was again rebuffed as to his geography and chronology. He stopped short, never to resume that story again, when one of the young ladies quickly remarked: "Freddie, your lamp is out."

Being cyclists all, the point was appreciated, and Freddie was silenced. "Scorching" is the term that indicates the making of very fast time. The suggestion is that the road was is being fairly burned by the rapidly flying wheel. Hence a young man who is traveling through life at a very rapid gait is called a "scorcher," and an especially jovial or hilarious gathering is referred to as a "scorching good time."

"He has punctured his tire" is a cousin to the generally understood expression, "He's off his trolley," and means that some person is acting in an extravagant, unreasonable or foolish manner. A cyclist who is weary or exhausted and desires to stop by the roadside for refreshments remarks to his companion, "Let us stop here and pump up," "pumping up" being the process of renewing the air in the pneumatic tire.

One of the delights of cycling is coasting down long hills. No effort is required other than to preserve an equilibrium. Hence a person with whom the affairs of this world are running very smoothly is referred to as "coasting." "Life is one continuous coast with him," remarked a friend cyclist as he stood with his wheel off the side of a park drive and watched a young man who is trying to spend $10,000 a year, spin by on a silver mounted wheel. When young are together the term "doomer" is used as applying to any member of the fair sex. "Here comes my bloomer." "He's out every morning for a spin with his bloomer." "His bloomer gave him the shake." or "Here's to the bloomers, bless 'em," are sample expressions heard at any of the hundred roadside resorts where the cyclist stops to allow his wheel to cool off.

A policeman is known among the fly young wheelmen as "a header," a term indicating the danger that lurks in the bluecoat for the cyclist. It is a reminiscence of the days of the high wheel, when a common and oftentimes serious accident was the "header" or dive over the wheel. The cyclist, a little device for registering the distance traveled is called a "ticker."—Examiner.

A Little Monster.

A dispatch from Lapone, Ind., says that State has a youthful murderer in Gilbert Bowler, four years old, who killed Bernice Collins at Monticello, his victim being a toddling infant of two years. Bowler who was in company with two other boys, passed Bernice on the street. The latter spoke to Bowler's companion and refused to notice him. This angered young Bowler and lying in wait for the Collins child he attacked her with stones and before her pitious cries for help brought relief she was dead. The authorities are puzzled as to what steps are to be taken in dealing with the boy, the annals of the State failing to record a parallel case. Both families are prominent.
